

THE MYTH OF DECREATION

In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth. Both promised the unstable harmony of the One and the different, strange embrace of the non-divine and the divine. And the Spirit of God was reflected in this harmony.

And Man said: "Cut the trees of the earth to make place for nuclear power plants, burn the forests for the profit of real estate companies and let the oil gush into the oceans and pollution from the factories fill the air of cities.

And the factories billowed smoke and transformed the soil into cement. And huge apartments blocked the view on the ocean. And man called these graveyards "Civilisation" and the trees he called retarded.

And God saw what man had done, and it was wrong.

And man said, "Let the earth produce only for me and for my own; let the others work at minimum wage for me and for mine, and let all the riches of all the peoples serve me for my own whims and not for the basic needs of others."

And machines threw tons of food into the bottom of the ocean so the profits of exportations would not fall. And the stomachs of children bloated with hunger and sociologists counted fifty million people dead of hunger in one year. And man called his work "free enterprise" and his own stolen riches he called "gifts from heaven".

And God saw what man had done and it was wrong. And from dusk to dawn men continued to die of hunger.

And man said, "Separate the blacks from the whites so they will not trouble our quietness. Go near them only to be served, they have no rights, for they soil the human race. And then separate nations from nations for some of them are greater than others."

And the earth was peopled with isolated ghettos and poor countries, with barbed wire fences and frontiers. And man called his own racism "purity" and his contempt for others was "patriotism".

And God saw what man had done, and it was wrong.

And man said, « They have no rights, because they use them only for immorality or injustice. They give their freedom to their boss so he decides in their place, or to the party so it can become their conscience". And man called the party «avant-garde» and the chief "the messiah".

And mouths were silent and streets were emptied, and prisons were filled and parents disappeared, and there was in all the cities the same peace as in graveyards. And from the rising to the setting of the sun, freedom continued to be absent.

And God saw what man had done, and it was wrong.

And man said, "Let the female be the image and the resemblance of my whims and work according to my desires, putting her weakness to the service of my whims." And man got rid of the woman, transformed her into an object and obliged her to thank him when he used her.

And God saw what man had done, and it was wrong.

And man said, "People the earth with nuclear arms which can destroy it hundreds of times. Aim at all the corners of the earth. Multiply arsenals even though they are already unnecessary, and I have in my hands, the death of the universe.

And missiles emerged over the surface of the world and terror paralyzed the earth. Came the dusk and the dawn and the sixth day rose.

And God saw what man had done, and it was wrong.

And man said, "Let us make terrorism to our image and may each one dictate his own justice and be the executor of his own judgements of condemnation. and man loaded his machine guns, stole explosives and got rid of the life of those close at hand, and disposed of the life of his own companions when they did not agree with him, and disposed of others to get even with the life of those who -according to them- were first to begin. And others called their own justice "death penalty" and others called it "justice of the people". And the face of the earth was full of blood.

And God saw what man had done, and it was wrong.

José Ignacio González Faus

